(2.1) Under the WTO's general principles of competition and investor-state dispute settlement its enforcement procedures could be subject to challenge by private parties in WTO member states. Private parties have consistently expressed the view that any proposal to bring about unilateral changes in the WTO's provisions should be avoided at all costs. A number of private parties have therefore sought, amongst other things, clarification of the rules for the enforcement of WTO rules, and clarification of the rules for the enforcement of WTO rules relating to the validity of determinations by the WTO for the purposes of international arbitration proceedings prior to a decision by a WTO member state. The governments of Argentina and Colombia, for example, were concerned by the possibility that their laws on patent and trademark rights would be subjected to review by the WTO. In response to a series of public consultations, the governments of Argentina and Colombia agreed to adopt amendments to their laws setting out the principles under which patent and trademark rights could be challenged in international and national courts. In addition, the two governments have jointly agreed with the governments of Argentina and Colombia to adopt procedures for considering applications for temporary injunctions or preliminary injunctions of the applications referred to in Articles 33(a) and(c) of the TIFA. The two governments also issued clear commitments to provide for their respective provisions of the TIFA, and, if they were later repealed or modified, provide for the adoption of new provisions by both countries. If neither of these obligations is satisfied by the agreement referred to in Subsection (2.1), if an application for a temporary injunction is being brought on or a preliminary injunction issued, the parties may, under section 9, apply together for an order declaring the proceedings were void. (5) On 30 August 2012 the European Parliament passed an amendment (EU Parliament No. 618/08, s. 2)) which, in accordance with Section 7(2), provides that on the occurrence of a decision of the Court from a WTO member state, the European Parliament or a member of its Council may, by resolution, request the Court to declare the proceedings were null and void within the meaning of Article 5(3) of the TIFA. The second subparagraph of this paragraph requires the Court to inform the European Parliament and the Council by no later than 30 October 2012 of the Court's decision.
