.10 I am running Ubuntu 13.10. I am trying to get my mouse to work for the first time in the past couple of weeks. It has worked for a few months. Since the installation, I have been unable to get the mouse to work. I have tried using the USB mouse and the PS2 mouse. I have tried all of the following: linux-image-3.8.0-19-generic 3.8.0-19.32 linux-generic 3.8.0.19.31 uname -r 3.8.0-19-generic lsusb /etc/initramfs-tools/initramfs.conf Any help would be appreciated. Thank you. A: Finally figured it out. I did not have correct permissions to write to the USB driver. I had to sudo. Share this article on LinkedIn Email Mercedes has decided to keep its engine options open for the new Formula 1 engine rules, with the team's immediate focus being to ensure it has a suitable engine for Australia. Mercedes technical director James Allison said in an interview with AUTOSPORT that it is focusing on putting as many parts of its 2014 engine as possible into its 2015 version. "We'll have two different versions, but I don't think they'll be very different at all," Allison said. "In particular we want to get the new regulations as much into the current engine as we can. "Then if we can give an engine development update to the next Formula 1 engine regulations in 2015 that we will. But we're not in a hurry to do that." Mercedes' 2014 power unit is powered by a revised version of its 'R29' V8, while the new F1 regulations require a smaller power unit. The new rules will allow for engines up to 2.5 litres in size, with the capacity for an increase to 3.5 litres to be introduced in 2015 if necessary. "It's a way of running more fuel," said Allison. "With all the problems that we had with reliability and performance, we are keen to improve on the reliability, and we think the new regulations are a step in the right direction in that. "With the performance of the current car we're not going to be able to improve the performance until the new 82157476af
